

There are now more opportunities for recreation along Victorian rivers. This factsheet explains what activities can and can't be undertaken on licensed and unlicensed Crown river frontages in Victoria*.

Crown land river frontage

A Crown river frontage is a strip of Crown land alongside rivers and streams varying in width from 20 to 100 metres or more. Victoria has 170,000 km of water frontage. About 30,000 km of this is Crown river frontage. The remainder is private land, reserves, parks, or state forests.

Licence holders

Some Crown land river frontages are subject to licences, issued by DELWP or Parks Victoria (the 'licensor') to the adjoining landowner/occupier (the 'licensee'), under section 130 of the Land Act 1958. A licence includes conditions for the licensee, including the management of the licensed land.

The licence does not give the licence holder exclusive use of the land: the public has the right to enter and remain on the land for some recreational purposes such as walking, fishing, and birdwatching. Camping is also permitted in specific, designated camping areas on licensed Crown river frontages.

A licence holder is subject to the same conditions as a member of the public when undertaking activities not specified in their licence conditions, such as recreational activities.

Further information

The Regulated Watercourse Land Regulations 2021 manage the recreational use of Crown river frontages, including camping.

These regulations establish a clear set of rules and behaviours for the recreational use of certain Crown land near watercourses, both licensed and unlicensed. The regulations balance recreational access with protecting agricultural, environmental, and Aboriginal cultural heritage values.

What you can and can't do

The table below outlines what you can and can't do on licensed and unlicensed Crown river frontages.

Licensed Crown river frontage is Crown land which has a frontage to a waterway and is licensed under the Land Act 1958. Unlicensed Crown river frontage is Crown land that is not licensed under the Land Act 1958.

*Information in this fact sheet refers only to Crown water frontages that are not within areas such as national, state or regional parks or Crown land reserves. Those areas are subject to other acts, regulations, and management arrangements.
